

Death of an Indian Boy.

Samuel Shem, aged about twelve years, the son of an Indian chief died at the Indian school yesterday of typhoid pneumonia.

Undertaker Gourley furnished a casket for burial.

The boy was one of the late arrivals at the Indian school and it is thought that a change of climate was the first cause of his sickness. There are several other students sick of the same ailment. These are inmates of the hospital and receiving the best of care and attention.
